Responsibilities of the Office of the Ohio Inspector General

Safeguarding Integrity in State Government

The Office of the Ohio Inspector General is authorized by state law to investigate alleged wrongful acts or omissions committed by state officers or state employees involved in the management and operation of state agencies. We at the Inspector General's Office recognize that the majority of state employees and public officials are hardworking, honest, and trustworthy individuals. However, we also believe that the responsibilities of this Office are critical in ensuring that state government and those doing or seeking to do business with the State of Ohio act with the highest of standards.

As an independent state agency, the Office of the Ohio Inspector General is committed to investigating allegations of wrongful acts or omissions without bias or outside influence. It is paramount that the investigative process is conducted in a timely, thorough, and impartial manner. The Office is dedicated to the principle that no public servant, regardless of rank or position is above the law, and the strength of our government is built on the solid character of the individuals who hold the public trust.

The jurisdiction of the Inspector General is limited to the executive branch of state government. It extends to the Governor, the Governor's cabinet and staff, state agencies, departments, and boards and commissions. Our jurisdiction includes state universities and state medical colleges, but does not include community colleges. The courts, the General Assembly, and the offices of the Secretary of State, the Auditor of State, the Treasurer of State and the Attorney General, and their respective employees and staffs are statutorily excluded from the jurisdiction of the Office of the Inspector General. Likewise, we have no authority to investigate allegations concerning any federal, county, municipal or other local officials, agencies, or governing bodies.

Those individuals who contract with state agencies or who otherwise do business with the state may also fall under our purview. Investigations may result from complaints received by the Office, or are opened through the initiative of the Office of the Ohio Inspector General.

The Ohio Inspector General does not become involved in private disputes, labor/management issues, or litigation. We do not review or override the decisions on the merits of a court or the findings of any administrative body. In order for the Office to begin an investigation, allegations of wrongdoing must specifically relate to wrongful acts or omissions committed by state officials or state agencies.

Similarly, we are not an advocate for either the state agency or the complainant in any particular case. Our obligation is to ensure that the investigative process is conducted fully, fairly, and impartially. As independent fact finders, we may or may not find wrongdoing as the result of an investigation. Nonetheless, we reserve the right to make administrative recommendations for improving the internal controls and operations of an agency.

Occasionally, matters investigated by our Office fall within the jurisdiction of other agencies such as law enforcement, prosecuting authorities, and regulatory bodies. In such instances, we may refer a case to, or work with, one or more of those entities in order to conduct a thorough and complete investigation.
